HUERTA'S VALEDICTORY.

"When I assumed the presidency I said publicly that I would restore peace, cost what it might. I have paid; it has cost me the presidency. To restore peace has been my whole and sole ambition. I hope it is coming. I am going to Europe and there I will stay until my country needs my sword sufficiently to call upon me. Should that time come I will gladly return."

PUERTO MEXICO, Mexico, July 18.—When I assumed the presidency I said publicly that I would restore peace, cost what it might. I have paid; it cost me the presidency. To restore peace has been my whole and sole ambition; I hope it is coming. More than this I have nothing to say," declared Gen. Huerta shortly after his arrival here last night.

Huerta professed to be worn out with his trip from Mexico City, and said that conditions were such that talking by him would do no good. Regarding his plans, he said: "I am going to Europe, and there I will stay until my country needs my sword sufficiently to call upon me. Should that time come, I will gladly return."

With Gen. Huerta will go some twenty officers, and whether they will return depends upon the attitude adopted toward them by the new government. Among these officers are Col. Jose Delgado, his private secretary; Gen. Blanquet, Gen. Paredes, Gen. Figuera, Gen. Alberto Quiroz, Gen. Fuentes, Col. Jose C. Delgado, Col. Fernando Gil, Col. Gabriel Huerta, Lieut. Col. Carlos Del

At Service of Carbajal.

During the day Gen. Huerta spent some time at Orizaba, receiving telegrams and sending messages. To President Carbajal he telegraphed:

"I desire that your government shall continue. If you should require any small services I assure you I am at your disposal."

He also sent messages to the governors of several states notifying them of his resignation and requesting that they support the new government. Messages during the same support of recognition for the new government were also forwarded to the diplomatic representatives in Mexico City.

Gen. Huerta hopes to leave here before tonight.

Gen. Huerta arrived here shortly after 9 o'clock last night. He was accompanied by Gen. Blanquet, his minister of war.

Capt. Kohler of the German cruiser Dresden offered him his ship "for any use he cared to make of her," but Gen. Huerta merely thanked him.

Heat Only Unpleasant Feature.

The trip to this port was without incident or unpleasantness other than that occasioned by the terrible heat of the tropical lowlands. With Huerta and Blaquiere were the general staff. The party occupied a train of nine sleeping cars, four of which were given over to troops. Two other trains loaded with nothing but troops preceded Gen. Huerta's train and arrived here an hour before the general train. The third and fourth train, also loaded with soldiers, were to guard against any rear movements. Capt. Kohler and staff, in formal dress uniform, were at the station and were presented officially to Gen. Huerta.

Answering inquiries as to the health of his officers, Gen. Huerta assured the British consul that he felt very well, although somewhat tired from the heat.

British Vice Consul Gemmill also called officially on Huerta and presented him with a message, presumably an offer of refuge on the British cruiser Bristol. Huerta read it and expressed pleasure at the consideration being shown him.

No Cheers for Exile.

When the train pulled in, scores of officers from the trains which had previously arrived lined along the wharf to get a glimpse of their depositor. The crowd was a checkered hand-pick. Those at the train side, as if by agreement, treated the arrival of the ex-president as a most solemn incident. The crowd present, but they exhibited nothing more than curiosity. About town absolute quiet prevailed; the town had already gone to sleep, and the only activity was that of the police on duty at the intersections of the streets had nothing more exciting to do than to hold conversations with each other when they were not sitting in the smoking cars.

ing room of the car when the train stopped. In front of him was Gen. Blanquet; both were in their shirt sleeves and without collars. The official delegation from the German cruiser climbed aboard the train before Gen. Huerta appeared to realize their presence, and then began a struggle to fasten coat collar and a rapid dressing scene was witnessed through the window by the crowd outside.

TO CUT DIAMOND PRODUCTION.

Three Largest Companies Agree to Curtail Yearly Output.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Notices of the signing of an agreement between three of the largest diamond-producing companies, controlling about 18 per cent of the world's supply, to curtail their yearly output have been received by diamond brokers here. The effect of the agreement, one broker said today, would be to put an end to competition between the three companies with the result that prices would be materially increased.

The companies that are parties to the agreement, according to the notices, are the German Diamond Company, Berlin, the De Beers Consolidated Mines Company and the Premier Diamond Min-

Putting on his collar, however, he turned back toward the door and called out into the aisle of the center car as he was to receive the German emperor. He had been told that the emperor would be in the same suit of clothes as he had worn in the streets of the capital, and he saw him now in the person of the flat brown hat that has long served to distinguish him.

"The emperor," he said, "is here." And were all the other members of the staff, and presented a startling difference between the emperor's habit and the uniform announced that Huerta and Blanquet would spend the night in the car, going to the palace where they were to attend the official call."

Huerta appeared tired and bored, and was in a cheerful mood. His chief of staff piled before him and Blanquet a great stack of telegrams, and they began to read them while the other officers sat at their side.

Huerta took one of his working coats and with a coat again off settled down to his task much as if he were at home. He had greeted his sons earlier in the evening, but not in any demon-
